

Dennis Petroskey
Senior Vice President, Communications

Dennis Petroskey is Senior Vice President of Communications for the U.S. Travel Association, which advocates on behalf of the entire $700 billion U.S. travel and tourism industry and works to increase travel to and within the United States. Petroskey coordinates all industry communications for U.S. Travel, enabling its nearly 2,000 members to stay informed in a timely manner on a host of policy issues, crisis response strategies and various other matters affecting the travel community.

Petroskey joined U.S. Travel in May 2005 after a communications career spent mostly in politics, government, and the entertainment industry. After working as a news reporter for the Falmouth Enterprise on Cape Cod, he served four years as a press secretary on Capitol Hill before moving to Los Angeles, where he was Vice President of Corporate Communications for Fox Inc., which included the Twentieth Century Fox film studio and the Fox television network among its companies.

Petroskey later served as Vice President of Corporate Communications for the major music company BMG Entertainment, now merged with Sony Music. Prior to joining U.S. Travel, Petroskey served as a Senior Advisor to then-U.S. Energy Secretary Spencer Abraham.

Updated November 2009