

U.S. TRAVEL ASSOCIATION

Zika Virus Talking Points

- The Zika virus is an incredibly complex situation, and there is still a lot we don't know about the virus. The travel industry must continue to rely on and listen to experts on this matter.
- U.S. Travel is monitoring Zika-related developments, coordinating with local travel and tourism leaders and engaging federal officials to help ensure that travel-related businesses, policymakers and the public have accurate, up-to-date information.
- After months of urging legislators to act, the travel community is relieved that Congress passed a short-term resolution that includes $1.1 billion in emergency funding to combat Zika.
- The travel industry is at-the-ready to fulfill its important part in this evolving situation and will continue to learn about the virus, educate our communities and adhere to recommended precautions.

Updated: December 9, 2016